

December 15, 2008

Great News

After seven weeks of stress and drama and rethinking my life's path after being laid off at work, I am happy to announce that I was offered continued employment with the City and County of San Francisco. I was transferred over from my previous job, which was nothing short of miraculous. I was merely days away from being unemployed. I start my new job on January 2 after a much-needed three week vacation.

During the seven weeks of stress, I made contact with a whole new world out there. Actually, it was my old world. I finally made connections with the people involved in community development in San Francisco and Oakland. There are neighborhoods out there that need my help. Volunteer opportunities abound! Super Geographer to the rescue!

Let the fun begin (again)!